

KID LAVIGNE KNOCKED OUT

GEORGE McFADDEN DROPS THE TRICK IN THE NINETEENTH ROUND.

For the first fourteen rounds the Kid Light Weight Champion Forces Matters, but the Local Man's Defense Tactics Are Too Much for Him—Kid Lavigne, who held the light weight championship until he was defeated at Buffalo by Frank Erne, suffered the first knock-out of his career at the Broadway A. C. last night. It was in the nineteenth round that George McFadden, the local lightweight, forced the former champion six times and then put him to sleep with a blow of the right hand on the jaw. For the first half of the battle Lavigne worked so hard to keep his man down that he exhausted his strength. McFadden in that time put up a remarkable defense and incidentally landed enough stiff counters to cause Lavigne's eyes. Then as the Kid's strength slowly vanished, McFadden's power increased so that when the proper time came he was able to win the match with decisiveness.

No such exhibition of gameness as that displayed by Lavigne has ever been seen at a local boxing club. He was blinded and groggy in the last round, yet after one knock-out he scrambled to his feet only to be beaten down again with blows that cut him to pieces. It was a fast fight all the way through, and thousands of dollars changed hands on the result. McFadden never fought with better judgment. His blows were marked with strength, and after one knock-out he was better than when he fought Erne, who failed to put him out, so that it would seem that McFadden is entitled to another bout with the present champion.

The house was packed when Eddie Daily of Baltimore faced Kid Lavigne in the first round in a twenty-round preliminary bout. At 12:20 p.m. Hayward said Daily's left eye in the first round with several hard swings. His eye still bleeding, Daily rushed in the second round, pouring in body blows and fencers. Hayward's efforts were all swings which, though full of force, failed to keep the momentum off. The third round was a fierce struggle.

Both men's faces were covered with gore and they were staggering when time was up. Daily forced the fight in the fourth and landed effectively with both hands, even though Hayward used his feet to keep away. Hayward was again in a tight state of the fifth, but he was strong enough to keep throwing in swings that hurt.

Daily continued to set the pace in the sixth, but Hayward temporarily stopped him with a great smash in the stomach and a couple of jabs on the jaw. Hayward, however, in the seventh and eighth rounds was again severely cut.

The eighth was another hot affair. Daily's stomach took some of Hayward's steam away and he went to his corner rather weary. Hayward breezed up in the ninth. He landed blow after blow on Daily's jaw, and with good hand ground and rounded with enough stomach drives to force Hayward to the defensive at the going. The mixup in the tenth round was so vicious that the crowd never stopped yelling. Both fell hard in a clinch shortly before the end. Terrific fighting marked the eleventh.

Hayward had his man bleeding from the eyes, nose and mouth, but the latter's body blows were just as effective as the Chicago man's fencers. Hayward had the last round, with plenty to spare, as Daily's strength failed him. Hayward got the decision from Referee Joe White.

The battle on Lavigne and McFadden was at odds of 10 to 0 on the former lightweight champion. There was not a vacant seat in the house before they came on and the noise was jammed in spite of the efforts of the bachelors to clear them.

It was estimated that 5,000 persons were present, many were turned away from the doors. Lavigne, who had been training faithfully for six weeks with Tom Sharkey, was pronounced in fine condition, and for that reason the "fancy" picked him to win. McFadden was also said to be in shape to put up his usual best.

He was first in the ring and was warmly received. His second were Billy Roche, Harry Tullih, Tommy Shortell and Arnie Maraden. Lavigne received an ovation when he crawled through the ropes a few minutes later. In his corner were Sam Fitzpatrick, Jeffrey Malone and Pat McGee. When the Kid stepped and the sports looked on, they overhauled their efforts to get their money down on his chances. The conditions of the match were twenty-five bouts at 133 pounds.

Before they shook hands Jim Jeffries, the California heavyweight, was introduced. Kid McFadden also got to the ring and had it announced that he wanted to meet the winner of the bout.

When the bell sounded McFadden ran out of his corner, working his hands rapidly and looking for an opening. He tried a left lead, which Lavigne blocked easily and with a swing for the head. Lavigne rushed over and missed a double swing. McFadden getting away easily, Lavigne rushed a third time and got his right to the ear. McFadden counting on the mouth. The latter also got a hot right blow and mixed it warmly until time expired.

McFadden began the second round by shooting his left equally to the eye. He forced the issue then. Lavigne meeting him with good blocking and swings that landed on the neck. Lavigne sidestepped away from a rush, and as McFadden went to the Kid drove the left elbow to the stomach.

The Kid also swung the right to the ear and McFadden almost lost his balance. He came back quickly, however, with lefts. Lavigne fighting him out once more with rapid jabs and belts in the wind.

The third opened with McFadden putting his left to Lavigne's face. The Kid rushed, sending over the right to the head and also punching the body with the same hand. Lavigne rushed again, boring in with tremendous swings. McFadden blocked skillfully and also worked his elbows repeatedly in the Kid's face. Lavigne continued his assault to the belt. McFadden putting back just two counters, both in the face.

Lavigne bored in as the bell for the fourth round sounded. McFadden meeting him with straight punches in the face. McFadden then broke away from the influence of a rush from short arm blows. He followed his man around the ring throwing in the last minute and staggered the Kid with a swing on the jaw. Even money was offered on Lavigne when the men were in their corners.

Lavigne was the aggressor again in the fifth. McFadden used his elbows once more and also twisted the Kid down in a clinch, some of the crowd hissing. They mixed it after that until Lavigne broke away under the influence of a rush from short arm blows. He followed his man around the ring throwing in the last minute and staggered the Kid with a swing on the jaw. Even money was offered on Lavigne when the men were in their corners.

fence. Lavigne feinted a moment until he saw an opening for a stomach blow which he hammered in with great power. Lavigne worked like a demon after that, but McFadden punched his eyes out. Lavigne's left hand was in the air when time was up. McFadden was as strong as an ox when he was down. Lavigne seemed to be tiring. Lavigne went after his man with more punches in the ninth. McFadden stood away and worked his left into the face. He blocked many swings and then both swung right and left for the jaw with the desired success. Lavigne did all the work in the last minute, but he did not inflict much damage. When the bell rang, the men, who were in a corner, smiled blandly at each other, and the crowd laughed.

As the tenth opened Lavigne bored in without delay. McFadden blocked and jabbed, the Kid coming to him all the time. McFadden missed a great uppercut and the Kid laughed. Lavigne kept on with his assault after that, but McFadden's remarkable defense saved him from a chance of receiving a decisive blow on a vital spot. Lavigne seemed to be tired of punching at his man when the bell rang.

Lavigne got to close quarters at the beginning of the eleventh and reached the body. McFadden retreated until he slipped down and was in a corner. RIVAL TEAMS, AT GOLF.

AMERICAN AND CANADIAN PLAYERS AT MORRISTOWN TO-DAY.

Rain prevented the Practice Rounds Yesterday—The Crescent A. C. and Dyker Meadow Men Matched for the First Time—Mrs. Dean Leads for the Short Course.

Team matches, one of international interest, the other of unprejudiced local importance, are the leading features of to-day's golfing on the M. G. A. links. The international event, the United States team, will play the Canadian team at the Morris County Golf Club, at thirty-six holes, between teams of ten representing the U. S. G. A. and the Royal Canadian Golf Association. The line-up of the teams will be as follows, according to the present plans:

U. S. TEAM: H. M. Hurlbut, A. W. Smith, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis. CANADIAN TEAM: J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis, J. H. Travis.

This is the second meeting of the representative teams, the Americans winning the first match at Toronto last fall, by 7 to 5. The United States team will probably win again. The match between Harriman and Smith, however, is a very open one, for the latter, next to Findlay S. Douglas, the best player in the country, is a special attraction. On account of the rain there was little practice yesterday at Morris County, but members of the American team will be in the links.

The local match will be the first meeting of the teams of the Crescent A. C. and Dyker Meadow Golf Club on the Crescent links. The United States team will probably win again.
